

A NEW JONAH SHOOTING ANIMAL

[illegible]

at that locality, and men, women and children were running up and down the street to avoid snipers who were firing from D streets, where they gathered aside, in front of the home-made road MacWilliams & Peiper, where the men place.

One of this kind almost every person knows the identity, how it originated, and how it led to the shooting, yet it is not a few questions that are asked. They were not as well posted as their imaginations led them to suppose. The men given names were correct: George W. Garner, a driver for the firm, and John Peiper, the Henry Peiper, who was a driver in a cab, the first named very much under the influence. A dispute arose about the second man. The latest was that he was a driver for the firm, but it was alleged that some of the drivers returned home, or rather not accounting for all the concerned.

and laid the ground on which the bakery was to be produced. The baker, and the owner, and the people who were to be employed, and to some consideration the baker's body else.

The party got to blows, and John started by his son Henry, put Garner front down on to the pavement, and down behind him. Garner, blinded by the blow, drew a knife and cut Henry, which he had taken from his father, which he had taken from his father, and fired two shots at him. He then turned and ran back to the bakery and delivered the shots through a window, one of which struck the back of Henry, another the left arm of John Peiper, between the wrist and elbow. Henry was seriously injured, and was taken to Matwies's drug-store, at the corner of Broadway and Pennsylvania avenue. The wounds were dressed, and Henry, and shortly afterwards removed to No. 300 York street, where he now lies.

Writing, is still unconscious from the wound he sustained in the attack on his recovery. Both men left from Baltimore, and came to the station house for a few minutes' connection with their partner, a branch man bakery. They have built up a fine it is said, are doing a very lucrative

After the shooting Garber started to leave, but in getting inside the car which he was driving he saw the man he was overhauling by Officer (informed him that he must accompany him to the station house. He attempted to resist the officer. At the of affairs Sergeant Vernon and the officer on the road. The young man went to the guard-house.

Twenty-seven years of age, about 5 feet 10 inches high, brown hair, blue eyes, regular features, dark hair and a good nose. On arriving at the station house he was taken to the agreed, to visit some of the saloons where he had been drinking. He returned to the bakery, where was the place, which she says originated by a company that had been in the city was near; that the customers could see, and witness an improvement was possibly the first time he had seen the older Peiper that he attracted the face, and upon a reputation of the drinking influence, that that between and the first there had always been the friendship, and this is the first misunderstanding between them, that had had the first and bold, there were several standing near, in the commencement of the trouble, so that he would have been able to see. Brock, Drs. Bliss and Bulky held a gun and decided to prove for the nail, and, and it was a very dangerous brain, but it was thought dangerous to attempt its removal. Both physicians pair—A glance at its history.

[illegible]

LOCAL METROPOLITAN BANK.
—
The corps of workmen were busily setting the finishing touches on the working of this banking-room.
—
With the times, the apartments in the bank were some weeks since remodelled. Handsome walnut came to modern dress enclosures of wire, and the receiving and transmitting bookkeeper, A. A. have been provided. The entire floor has been newly laid in the walls handsomely papered, with a lavender and imitation of walnut's inlaid in oak and walnut, the ceiling

Metropolitan is the oldest bank in the District, with the exception of Washington. It was started in 1812, at the Fifteenth and M streets enterprise, but was regularly incorporated under the management of John A. McLean, then president of the Bank of the United States, which position he continued to hold until his death, in March, 1861. At that time he was also president of the bank, and he was the first to have the name changed to the United States National Bank, at the solicitation of President Lincoln, in 1863. Since that time it has been headed by such as John A. McLean, Jackson's Army at New Orleans, and the first banking president of the United States, and has since then helped the Government after the war of 1861-65, and the war of 1898, and the war of 1914-18, and the war of 1918-19. It was for many years the only bank in the District, and it was the only one to have a branch in the District. As illustrative of the industry of this institution, it may be noted that it has been in business for over 150 years.

bank, who took at that time with him, the position of denounce for the impeachment of Mr.
Hovey, charged the bank. The National Bank, however, was not Peter Force, charged upon Mr. Alexander, the cashier, intentional fraud upon the part of the treasurer, and the force, but the matter was finally adjudged in court, each party paying his respective share of the cost of the trial.
The decline of the popularity of Mr. Van president of the bank, it may be remarked, was the result of the action of Washington by large majorities of the board of directors, and the death of Mr. Van Ness, John W. Maury, the director, succeeded him. Maury, with the history of Washington as was chosen as the president of the Metropolitan, and it continued to build confident during the administration which lasted until his death. George a prominent four merchant of was asked in 1906, when he retired, he was succeeded by Thomas J. Carberry, a lawyer associated with the interests and who continued to adorn the office with integrity and vigorous intellect to the death of Mr. Carberry, the present president of the association. Mr. John was chosen to fill the vacant post and he has performed his duty to the great popularity of this time-honored post office.

Of the substantial basis upon which the bank was founded, and of its unimpaired financial condition, the following descriptive phrase was started about 1850 in juxtaposition to the banking-house, and applied to the bank from the time it was transferred to the new building, and being set off as the "Bank of the Metropolis." It was "on a solid basis, and with the security and confidence of Citizens' Savings Bank and Co., but was very short-lived."

Officers of the institution have been four times, all gentlemen of culture and great integrity, viz: Alexander Scott, George Richard Smith and Moses Kellie, the present.

The National Metropolitan present modernised arrangements for peace, comfort and business. May be very grow less.